Food Hygiene and Technology

48th Lenfeld's and Hökl's Days

100th anniversary of the University of Veterinary Medicine in Brno

CONFERENCE FOCUS:

The Lenfeld's and Hökl's days are an international conference focusing on plant and animal origin food safety and quality throughout the food chain including the mass caterers. The conference yields the latest outcomes of research and their application, as well as the food law application issues. The conference provides an opportunity to meet experts from scientific organizations, supervisory bodies and practice in the field of food production, inspection and quality evaluation. A meeting with the history of veterinary food hygiene will complement the professional part of the conference.

The conference is held as part of the celebrations of the 100th anniversary of the University of Veterinary Medicine in Brno.
